Ammenica in the second Talk of hands that rule a country, It takes two hands somehow-The one that rocks the cradle And the one that guides the plow.

Is necessary in order to make sure of good crops every season, and it can't be done with poor Piows. That the cultivation of the soil may be carried on to the best advantage, it is necessary that the farmer be supplied with a sufficient stock of machines and implements of the best construction. Of all implements of the farm, the first place is unquestionably due to the plough. A history of this implement, tracing its progress from its primitive form in ancient times to its most improved form at the present day, is necessarily a history of agriculture. So much is this the case, that a tolerably correct estimate of the progress of éivilization in any country, in ancient or modern times, may be formed by ascertaining the structure of the plow. Different plows are adapted for different kinds of soil and it is well to remember that W. F. POWELL, the machine man at Warren, sells Plows that have been tested and tried, and known to be just the thing for the Red River Valley. There has been too much poor plowing here in the past, and many felds are consequently getting over run with weeds. What is worth doing at all is worth doing well, and there is no excuse now for doing poor plowing when W. F. POWELL stands ready to supply every farmer with a
